Hongkong, March 2nd, 1896. ERROR dies hard. The China Mail Saturday evening once more refers to the efforts made to save the Taipingshan area from destruction and says that "the gain "to the colony which would have accrued had "the condemned district been properly and "promptly dealt with at the time, but for the "frantic efforts of the Property Cabal, no "doubt can now be raised." The sentence is as mistaken in fact as it is faulty in con struction. In the first place there was no "Property Cabal" in the case all, and in the second place, there is reason to suppose that had the district been hurnt there would have been one case plague the less in the coluny. So far as a farewell to four ladies who are leaving for property owners were concerned, their personal and pecuniary-interests lay in the total destruction of all the houses. To those who owned property in the area the resump tion by the Crown gave them a return for demand for house accommodation on the part of those who had been turned out of Taipingshan. The agitation for the partial improvement of the condemned area instead of its total demolition and reconstruction rested therefore on an entirely unselfish ground, namely, the saving that would thereby have resulted to the public the rates falls. The agitation failed however total demolition being decided upon, but the Government, seeing no advantage to be gained by burning, elected to sell the material of which the houses were composed. What amount is expected to be realised by very considerable. The saving of the whole plague is concerned, but it would be some advantage to allay apprehension. In another column it will be seen that the material composing thirteen houses in Tank Lone is advertised for sale on Friday next. At the present time, when a few sporadic cases of plague are occurring and the colony has been declared infected, the sale of this material might create an unfavourable impression and cause needless alarm, and as the pecuniary side of the question is now really not worth consideration it might be advis-

THE question of directors' fees is at present exciting some interest in the colony. When the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank twelve months ago increased the amount payable to the gentlemen constituting the Board not a word of dissent was uttered at the meeting at which the decision was arrived at, but some outery was raised afterwards, and the same thing has occurred in connection with the increase in the fees of the directors of the Hongkong and Whampon Dock Co. decided upon the other day. It would be more satisfactory if the dissentients would attend the meetings at which such questions are raised, argue out the point, and endeavour ALL these are selected by our London to give effect to their views, instead of writincrease of fees is in contemplation, if and formal notice were given of the resolution. intended to be proposed, so that shareholders might have an opportunity of considering the matter beforehand. Such matters ought not to be carried by a surprise votoquestion. and, if the truth were known, it is probably more the manner in which the increase is given than the actual increase itself that excites hostility. Directors are a necessity, they have duties to perform, they incur legal responsibilities, and it is only reasonable thatthey should be fairly remunerated. Each case should be judged on its own merits. The dollar is now worth only half of what it used to be in sterling, and where the business of a Company has largely increased product of the juice of the grape and are and the profits can afford it it seems not unnot artificially made from raisins and reasonable that the directors should willing to take something in the way of exchange compensation, like Government officials, though the increase may not be called by that name. In the case of Consulting Committees the circumstances are rather different from Companies managed by a Board Directors. The functions of a Consulting Committee are more or less nominal and the lagal responsibility rests Consulting Committees cannot, therefore, in any great number. expect to be treated on quite the same footing as directors. For our own part, however, we would be glad to see the principle of payment by results introduced into public companies all round. Let the fixed fees be low, just sufficient to give some tangible remuneration for the time and trouble expended, and a percentage of the profits be was not only useless but a grave embarrassgiven when the dividend exceeds a certain amount. When shareholders have to go without dividends or with only very small ones it is natural that they should slook with an unfriendly eve on the figures in the accounts representing gunboat Illis at that port is in connection with the cost of management, but when a Company is paying dividends at the rate twenty-four per cent. it seems a little ungracious to carp at the more liberal muneration of directors. THE OVIDE MUSIN CONCERT.

On Saturday evening Ovide Musin, the violinist, assisted by Madame Musin, soprano, and Mr. E. Scharf, planist, gave his first concert at the Theatre Royal. M. Musin stands undoubtedly in the first rank of his profession and his playing on Saturday night, with the wondorful and indescribable effects he produces, was a revolution to many of these present. He has been described as belonging to the ornamental school, and ornamental he can be in pieces that lend themselves to that form of treatment, but he struck us as being even stronger in passages of genuine feeling and sentiment. . The soul of music breathes through his whole performance and true genius makes itself felt in every note. The audience was entirely carried away by his playing and the high expectations raised by the laudatory notices of the musician which had appeared in reference to his performances elsewhere were fully realised. M. Musin opened the programme with F. Reis's suite in G. minor. each of the four numbers being loudly applauded, and at the end he had to return to bow his acknowledgments. The "Souvenir of Havdn " (Leonard)-No. 4 on the programme. met with an enthusiastic encore, to which he replied with a charming screnade by Pierne. In the second part of the programme M. Musin gave a double number (a) "Prize Song from Meistersinger" (Wagner-Wilhelmi) Mazurka, a composition of his own, and being again enthusiastically encored he gave the finale of his second caprice. We cannot pretend to give any technical criticism of the maestro's playing; it was simply magnigentle whisperings of the sweet harmonics. Two more concerts are to be given, one this evening and another on Wednesday, and no one who appreciates music in its highest form should Madame Musin persenses a well trained and flexible soprane voice of extraordinary range

Mr. Scharf is evidently an able planist, but he was labouring under a disadvantage on Saturday night, as something went wrong with the instrument at the outset, causing one or two of the notes to jar very unpleasantly. He had consequently to play with a restraint that robbed his performance of the element of spontaneity and enthusiasm. As it was, liowever, he made an excellent impression on the audience and was very warmly applauded both for the Nocturn (Chopin) and Perpetuum Mobile (Weber Brahms), which formed his contribution to the first part of the programme. and Liest's Hungarian Rhapsody in the second part, though the defect of instrument and its effect on the player were especially noticeable in the last named. We look forward with pleasure to hearing Mr. Scharf to better advantage this evening, when the little accident to the piane, an instrument of beautiful tone supplied by Messrs. W. trust? Who is there who has not to meet every day a man ora woman who heknows would if he or she had not to give an convalent (an immoral sentiment), stab him in the back on the first opportunity? He who commits criminal acts against the man he calls his friend must be classed with the Kirghis chief who, whilst lavishing gifts on his guest, organizes an expedition to rob him before he reaches the next encampment. How many amongst our friends can we name who are precisely what they pretend to be? With what a feeling of healthy pride do we think of the one man we can trust implicitly—showing both that we have an ideal morality and how few of those with whom we have to do have attained to it. Is this the degree of morality we should expect to accompany the magnificent intellect which succeeds in everything but in causing us to stay our progress in other directions and give heed to the one thing needful? When we remember that we have invented the phonograph, or that can transmit four messages in pairs in opposite directions along the same wire at the same time, that someone has written the Principles Psychology and the Ethics, whilst men discover planets which they cannot see and analyse the vapours of chemical changes in Sirius, we might seriously expect that a society which displays so high an intellectual state would display an equally high moral state. Yet what do we find?-our newspapers gloating on the details of murders and massacres, our legislators by imprudent measures sacrificing human lives for votes at the next election.

five million followers of him who commanded them to turn the cheek to the emiter armed to the teeth with the express purpose of exterminating their fellow Christi millions annually spent by Christians in devising more efficient means of blowing Christians into eternity, the selling by tens of thousands in a few days of sensational novels which appeal to the lowest emotions. the toleration in our drawing rooms of a thinly veiled type of conversation more meet for the philanderings of the common lodging house, a growing disregard of truth and plain dealing in private and business life-in short, a state of moral uncivilization which, since it cannot be said to be characteristic of savage life, we have no alternative but to place somewhere below savagery. We must rese to call ourselves civilized as long as we allow hese relics of ultra-savagery to survive in our midst. Murrder and the phonograph belong rightly to two different stages of the world's history and their co-existence in a suciety shows that these stares co-exist, and as one cannot be described as indicative of savagery so neither can the other be said to be a sign of civilization: the immoral trait survives along To stock of wines and provisions with the intellectual triumph; and we are, in so for, uncivilized. It has been said in another connection: "Not reverence, not admiration, scarcely even respect, is caused by the might of a hundred million Parans masquerading as Christians, and we may here add that neither are these feelings caused by the sight of a hundred million saveges marquerading as civilized men. It would surely be worth our while to pause and listen to the still small voice only now and then audible in the great and strong whirlwind of our mad intellectual One of the most slarming discoveries the student of the present day can make is that the weakness of our moral nature is scarcely even recognised. Read the utoniss and elaborate plans for the reconstruction of spciety which are published periodically, and you find the physical and intellectual parts of our civileation are the prominent topics, whilst the moral is either left out of abcount altogether or passed over in a few pages. Our newspapers and magazines are full of papers and articles about the weakness of our strong navy, but scarcely a line do we see on the weakness of our weak selves. Here and there only is a writer to be found who lifts up a dissentient voice by the roadside as the pageant of intellect passes by, and who begs for a little aid to the cause morality from those who throw up their caps in its wake. We are forced finally to acquiesce in the words of Amiel, the thinker. "The statistician will register a growing progress and the moralist a gradual decline, on the one hand a progress of things; on the other a decline of The whole becomes less bar-

It has at least salvation in brinciple, the germ of sternal life. ... to know is not virtually to love the redemption wrought by By rents of shops and offices science or by intellectual love is then interior to By dividends on shares...... the redemption wrought by will or by moral Science, however spiritual and enbetantial it may be in itself, is still formal relatively to love. Moral force is then the vitel point" Other writers, our philosophers especially, might be quoted in similar strain, but sum them all up and what a feeble shout it is after all compared with the roar of the huge intellectual breakers which flood our social life. > THE HORRORS OF CHINESE EMI GRATION IN NATIVE CRAFT.

The energetic officials who want to regulate British shipping out of the emigration trade might with advantage peruse the following translation from the Deli Courant. which a correspondent sends to the Singapore Free Press -At the end of January and beginning of February there arrived at Belawan, Deli, from China direct, three tongkangs with cargoes of I about 240 coolies each, consigned to three Deli treatment The three tongkangs, with the remainder of their pitiful cargoes, sneaked out of Belawan harbour before sunrise on the 10th inst., probably with a view of honouring the Malay Peninsula with a visit. They may try to land the opolies at some of the smaller ports on our

There is reason to suspect that cholers. had broken out on board the tongkangs before the hundred odd men were landed on the 5th inst. for several corpses were seen floating down the river before that date. Another tongkang, No. 4, called at Asahan and landed there three men, but was forbidden to go to Belswan: but on the 13th inst. a tongkang, teeming with Chinese, tried to enter the port of Belawan. Whether this was No. 4 that called at Asahan, or No. 5 which was still expected from China, was not ascertained However, the vessel was at once towed out to sea again by a Government launch and given to understand that another trial to enter would mean trouble.

The correspondent adds:—The misery these coolies must be exposed to on the long run in a primitive Chinese sailing vessel from China to Deli, from insufficient food and water, want of shelter, sleeping space, etc., must be similar to the horrors of an African slave dhow.

THE FRENCH MAIL.

The M.M. steamer Salazie, with the French mail of the 31st January, arrived on Saturday. The following telegrams are from the Times of Ceylon -THE OUTEN'S SPEECH. London, 11th February. Parliament was opened to-day by Royal Commission. The Queen's Speech's as read by the Lord Chancellor was as follows:-"I continue to receive assurances of friendly sentiments from Foreign Powers. The principal object of the Angle-French treaty in Siam is to make more secure the establishment of the independence of the kingdom of Siam. I have accepted with the Emperor of Russia a line agreed upon by the Commissioners for delimitating the frontier of India and Afghanistan from the Russian dominions. The Government of the United States has expressed a wish to co-operate in terminating the differences between Great Britain and Venezuela, and I have expressed sympathy with the desire to come to an equitable arrangement, and I trust that further negotiations will lead to a satisfactory settlement. The Sultan has sanctioned the principal reforms in Armenia urged by Great Britain. France, and Russia. I deeply regret the fanatical outbreak of a section of the Turkish population, resulting in series of massacres causing the deepest indignation in Great Britain." Her Majesty then alludes to the armed incursion into the Transveal from the territory of the Chartered Company, resulting in a de-plorable collision with the Boers, which the British Government promptly intervened to prohibitand warnedits subjects against participating in. The origin of the proceeding will be the subject of a searching enquiry. President Kru-ger, acting with moderation and wisdom, has placed his prisoners in the hands of Sir Hercules Robinson, and I undertake to bring to trial their leaders. President Krauer's conduct and his voluntary assurances lead me to believe that he recognises the importance of redressing the legitimate grievances complained of by the majority of the inhabitants of the Transvaal." Her Majesty then alludes to the necessity for, and fortunate result of, the Ashantee Expedition. Her Majesty and her daughter are greatly tonched and comforted at the widespread sympathy at home and abroad regarding the death of Prince Henry of Battenberg. Her Majesty hopes that an efficient British control over Kumassi will tend to develop the country. benefit the people, and promote peace and commerce. Allusion is then made to the success of the Chibral ongagement with the border tribes to maintain and protect the road from Peshawar, which will be loyally observed Her Majesty then says that the extension and improvement of the naval defences of the country is the most important subject to which the efforts of Parliament can be directed. Messures will be presented during the session to mitigate agricultural distress, and further assistance will be given to voluntary schools. An Irish Land Act and the following Bills are 5,508.38 announced: Compensation for Injuries to
